What Should I Consider Suspicious?

Individuals Appearance:
- Significantly alters appearance from visit to visit (shaving beard, changing hair color, style of dress, etc)
- Missing hand/fingers, chemical burns, strange odors or bright colored stains on clothing
- Wearing backpacks or heavy coats when the weather is warm

Individuals’ Activities Consisting of:
- Overly interested in the following:
  - entry points
  - peak days and hours of operation
  - security personnel
  - surveillance assets (including cameras)
    - access controls such as alarms, barriers, doors, gates, or locks
- Loitering, parking, or standing in the same area over multiple days with no reasonable explanation
- Observation of security reaction drills or procedures (may cause incident to observe response)
- Discreet use of cameras, note-taking, or video recorders over an extended period
- Several men arriving together then splitting up, continuing to communicate by phone (dry run?)

Individual Discussions:
- Unusual interest in speaking with building maintenance personnel or security guards
- Observations/questions about air conditioning, heating, and ventilation systems
- Suspicious comments made regarding radical theology, vague or cryptic warnings, or anti-U.S. sentiments that appear to be out-of-place and provocative

It is important to remember that just because someone’s speech, actions, beliefs, appearance, or way of life is different; it does not mean that he or she is suspicious.

Each indicator listed above, is by itself, lawful conduct or behavior and may also constitute the exercise of rights guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution. In addition, there may be a wholly innocent explanation for conduct or behavior that appears suspicious in nature. For this reason, no single indicator should be the sole basis for law enforcement action. The totality of behavioral indicators and other relevant circumstances should be evaluated when considering any law enforcement response or action.
